TRANSFORMING LIVES THROUGH CAREFLEX

Moving and Handling

Moving and Handling

Comfort and Security

We take great pride in our extensive range of moving and handling equipment, which is designed to the highest standard and always with comfort and safety in mind.

All of our products are easy to clean - many can be machine washed and dried, helping to reduce costs and increase convenience.

Guidelines for moving and handling

Our high quality, innovative range of moving and handling equipment is tailor made for assisting with transfers, reducing the risk of injury to both the carer and the person being moved.

But before any moving or handling procedure, it is vital that a thorough risk assessment is carried out to evaluate whether the equipment being used is fit for purpose.

The equipment should only be used by those who have had specific moving and handling training. If you are in doubt about any procedure please consult your moving and handling advisor.

- When using a transfer belt or sling the user must be able to provide the majority of standing effort, they are designed as aids to control movement and to provide support. If you find yourself supporting a load of more than 10kg assist the user to a safe sitting position as soon as possible.
- Transfer belts and slings should not be used to lift the user under any circumstances. You must be able to let go of the belt should a user trip or fall to help prevent both parties being injured. Therefore, you must not fit your hands or wrists through the belt loops or handles.
- Due to the low friction nature of slide sheets they should never be left unattended and should be stored safely after use. Always ensure that any areas of the user's anatomy that could be affected by friction (e.g. heels, elbows) during the procedure are adequately protected.
- Before each use check the item for any damage, tearing or fraying (paying particular attention to seams and buckles). If there are any signs of wear, take the item out of service immediately.
